

Amer Jabry Profile

Amer specialises in making complex concepts and issues clear, accessible and relevant to international audiences with varied experiences, languages and educational backgrounds. He delivers his seminars using a participatory approach that actively engages delegates' own knowledge and experiences into the seminar topic. Since 1990, Amer has delivered hundreds of workshops and training seminars in over 20 countries.

He currently teaches an MSc course on Management Information and Information Systems at the Centre for Financial and Management Studies at the University of London. He is also a faculty member of Management Centre Europe, and delivers the strategy module of MCE's Mini-MBA programme.

Amer has extensive practice in working with senior managers in international organisations to develop, communicate and implement strategies with the staff at all levels. In 2006, he delivered 20 courses on effective business writing to a major private sector company in the UK. Participant approval ratings were over 95% for all courses.

He has worked as an economist for Barclays Bank; as a management consultant for Coopers & Lybrand (now PriceWaterhouseCoopers); and as a global strategy advisor for Plan International, a major non-governmental organisation with an income of over US$400m and operations in 60 countries. He now runs E-Merge Consulting – a management consultancy providing strategy, research, facilitation and training services to organisations around the world.

Amer studied Economics and Statistics at the University of Bristol, and holds a Masters Degree with Distinction in Development Economics from the School of Oriental and African Studies of the University of London.

He is based in London, United Kingdom and speaks Arabic and English.
